

BLOWING
her cover

Edsa

Her story is simple.

Like Rosa Parks, Sojourner Truth, Mahatma Ghandi, Martin Luther King Jr, she saw something wrong going on,
and decided to do something about it.

She dared to speak out. She knew it might be dangerous. She was scared.

Others had died - been murdered.
She had children. So she spoke under cover. One day, her cover was blown.

This tells it
from the other side of the story.

BLOWING HER COVER

blowing her cover
I am not a free speech lover but I am free
to scare

to blow her cover her fun is over
she is scared
because she dared

yeah, I'm blowing her cover let her run scared
blowing her cover
because she dared
she dared
to speak
though under cover
because she dared

because - damn her - she dared so I'm blowing her cover announcing to the world

here she is
here's where to find her yeah, you can come and get her

I'm announcing to her yeah, I'm announcing to HER that I've announced to the world

here she is
here's where to find her
yeah, you can come and get her

I've blown her cover and she knows it

blowing her cover - far from enough she wouldn't know it wouldn't be scared

if I didn't let her know I'd announced to the world yeah, let her be scared let her squirm

serves her right
she dared
serves her right
she cared
enough to dare
serves her right !!!!

don't you dare
don't you dare dare

I'll blow your cover
if you dare
if you dare speak out if you care enough to dare and then you'll run scared terrified

for your life
you'll run scared
like a rabbit
hounded by a wolf

yeah, you'll run scared so don't you dare
tell the truth
don't you dare

or I will blow your cover

you can run and hide I will run and find
and blow your cover

if you dare
if you dare tell the truth if you care
enough to dare

got it - better be too scared
to dare

GOT IT - better be too scared
to dare

or I will blow your cover

will you get blown away?
don't know
and don't care

but you will be scared
because you dared

you will be scared

you

family

friends

neighbors

you will be scared

yeah you dared
to speak

you cared
to speak

and now you're scared

serves you right

you know the rules

don't you dare

you hear me

don't you dare

don't you dare

dare

it's such fun
to see you run

scared

soon there will be no one no one who dares

for now
such fun
to see you run
scared

signed,

I dare to scare you
I double dare you to try again

I am no one who needs to run scared yeah I am not scared
no need for me
to run scared

but you are scared
because you dared

better run for cover
I am not a free speech lover

but in your world
I am free
to scare

yeah, blowing your cover your fun is over
you are scared
because you dared

signed,

better run for cover
I am not a free speech lover

Elsa

July 15, 2011 - 10:30 am copyright, 2011, Elsa Schieder, all rights reserved

Not everyone is afraid of fatwas.
One well-known American television personality has made fun of the fatwa against him. Others live with some anxiety.
Some live terrified. Some are in hiding.

Why do people dare speak out, given the threat of fatwas for saying things that some Muslims will not tolerate being said

- things they deem deserving of death.

Most often, the people who speak care about telling the truth as best as they can figure it out, care about freedom of expression for all people. They care to protect precious rights, won with so much struggle.

come to:

Blowing Her Cover

stay in touch:

FREE UPDATES

more:

more from the Rap Emporium

Ezeena, Rap Diva

contact Elsa

a.k.a.

Ezeena,

Rap Diva